

Brigg Fair of Frederick Delius (Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, Sir Thomas Beecham, conductor; WNCN)

Geography and the creation of aesthetic forms what are those aesthetic forms which are most characteristic of island countries what are those aesthetic forms which are most characteristic of nonisland countries what are those aesthetic forms created by those nations which have abundant national space for expansion what are those aesthetic forms which are created by those nations which do not have sufficient national space for expansion what are those aesthetic forms created by newly established newly independent nations what are the geographical givens for example which result in the creation of allegorical aesthetic forms what are the geographical givens which resulted in the creation of Titian's Diana and Actaeon (Duke of Sutherland Collection, on loan to the National Gallery of Scotland, Edinburgh) what are the geographical givens which resulted in the creation of Goya's Saturn Devouring His Son (c. 1818, Prado) what are the geographical givens which resulted in Purcell's King Arthur, or The British Worthy what are the geographical givens which result in the creation of operas what is the geographical explanation for the dearth of English operas until the twentieth century what is the geographical explanation for the abundance of operas in Italian German French written in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries if for example the Mississippi River had become the western border of the United States how would American painting in the nineteenth century be different if England had not occupied the preeminent position on the waves of the world how would the history of English music in the period from the death of Purcell (November 21, 1695) until the closing years of the nineteenth century be different what are the geographical givens which result in the creation of programmatic symphonic music what are the geographical givens which result in the creation of nonprogrammatic symphonic music what are the geographical givens which result in the creation of novels of poetry of theatre of essays what are the geographical givens which resulted in the creation of the Hôtel de Soubise what are those aesthetic forms which are most characteristic of mountainous nations what are those aesthetic forms which are most characteristic of nonmountainous nations geography physical geography and the creation of aesthetic forms what are the geographical stimuli?